CITY COUNCIL SUPPORTS RENAMING OF MAIN POST OFFICE IN HONOR OF GORDON CHAN

(San José, CA) – Today, San José City Council approved to support the effort to rename the San José Main Post Office on Lundy Avenue to the Gordon N. Chan Post Office. This effort was in collaboration with Congressman Mike Honda to commemorate the accomplishments of an important Berryessa resident who had strived for an improved quality of life for all in San José.

“As a longtime supporter of Little Saigon, I am extremely pleased the Vietnamese Community can now move forward to display the banners,” said Councilmember Kansen Chu. “The Vietnamese Community had fought long and hard for the remembrance of their homeland in the City of San José through the name ‘Little Saigon.’ The installation of the Little Saigon banners not only is a celebration of a vibrant retail area but also will be a visible testament to the identity and solidarity of the Vietnamese-American community in San Jose.”

San José has the largest Vietnamese-American population in any city in the world. The Little Saigon Banner Agreement will be one step closer in properly acknowledging and recognizing their contributions to the greater San José community. “I believe funding a Little Saigon banner is an important first step in celebrating Vietnamese-American residents and their contributions in San José,” added Councilmember Chu. “I look forward to facilitating the positive dialogue that will take place in the near future regarding a permanent gateway sign across Story Road.”
